PROGRAM NOTES

As theatre artist John Walton said, devised theatre is “a process in which the whole creative team develops a show collaboratively. From actors to technicians, everyone is involved in the creative process.”

Devising can take inspiration from anything, as long as the collaborators involved are passionate about the subject. In this particular instance, the students of Devising Theatre incorporated the following source material to create their performance: The Buggles’ 1980 song “Video Killed the Radio Star,” research of the social creation of monster stories, choreography and cut-up phrases from journal entries, among other inspirations. These materials culminated in a group exploration of modernized monsters in a fading radio industry.

Devising is not necessarily about creating a “play” – it’s about creating an experience. We hope that your experience of the performance gives you something to think about after the show.
